

Streatley-on-Thames is an attractive village in an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. It is not only a beautiful place, it has other historical and interesting associations. When the seas receded, calcified sea creatures remained to form the chalk Downs of West Berkshire. Here, centuries ago, Streatley had its origins. In ancient times, as now, it was the site for the meeting of transport routes as they crossed the Thames. The best-known is The Ridgeway, which from the Iron Age or before, served as a route 250 miles long along the top of the chalk ridges from Dorset to The Wash. In the valleys, the Icknield Way ran to Knettishall Heath in Norfolk. The habitats created by its development and history make Streatley special. Thus, the river, the water meadows, the chalk downlands and the woods all have their specific flora and fauna. Chalk grassland in particular, with its flora and butterflies, is now extremely rare. The flood plains, important in flood prevention, are of vital importance with the expectancy of flooding caused by global warming.

Circular Walks

Red kite

Because of the importance of chalk grasslands, a large area of Streatley is owned by the National Trust. This includes Lough Down, Lardon Chase, The Hollies and Common Wood. These are managed to encourage wildlife.

Adonis Blue

Two circular walks are described (see map). One is via the Golf Course, Lough Down and Lardon Chase. The second is via The Hollies, the village and Lough Down. There are opportunities to vary these using other rights of way. When the second walk reaches the High Street, there is a pavement on the other side of the road, which joins the Thames Path.

Pyramid Orchid

There are two public houses in Streatley, The Bull and The Swan Hotel. Goring has several public houses, a cafe and a number of shops and restaurants. Petrol is available at Lower Basilidon & Moultsford.
